FINANCIAL AID

Fourteen graduate teaching assistantships (GTA) are offered by the department, which require students to support the instructional and teaching laboratory programs on a part-time basis. In addition, faculty members employ graduate research assistants (GRA) who are performing thesis research on programs funded by government and private agencies. A few highly competitive fellowships and housing allowances are also available. Fellowships, traineeships, and assistantships normally provide stipends of $7,000 to $17,000 per academic year, tuition, full medical and dental insurance, and in some instances, a housing allowance in University-affiliated facilities.
